Race, Racism, & Racial Equity: 11th Grade Thrively Lesson

Presented by the
AUHSD Black Lives Matter
Task Force

Hello Class!

February is Black History Month. Since August of 2020, the AUHSD Black Lives Matter (BLM) Task Force has been at work, addressing a variety of issues related to racial justice in our district. In an effort to bring the concepts of racial justice to the forefront of your education during Black History Month, the BLM Task Force created a lesson for all 11th graders to help you explore and think critically regarding concepts of race, racism, and racial equity. While this topic may feel sensitive for some, it is a crucial part of Civic Engagement that we value in the AUHSD. You will access the lesson through your Thrively account. If you are interested in engaging in deeper conversation about how you can apply the lesson to your everyday life, please attend the BSU Leadership Summit on Saturday, March 4, 2023 - sign up here!

Exercise 1: A Conversation with Latinos on Race

Has assimilation taken precedence over your cultural identity? Are you aware of your heritage? Watch the following video to view how some Latinos tackle these questions.

Please take time to thoughtfully reflect on each question.

This lesson is designed to help you explore and think critically about concepts such as race, racism, and racial equity, which can be a challenging topic. Inappropriate comments or remarks will be identified for correction.

After you've submitted the Thrively lesson, check out the upcoming Black History Month events! There are lots of community service opportunities!
